Get Help with Library-related Questions

We don't like to see you suffer in silence when you are struggling to figure out the right database to use for your research, the right keywords to use for your searches, how to find a book in the stacks (how to understand what stacks are!), or any other library-related question. Help is available! You can:

1. Go to the Library Service Desk for help (research help on the left, circulation on the right).
2. Use the Chat Box on the left column of the Libraries home page salisbury.edu/libraries
3. Email us at libraries@salisbury.edu or call the Research Help Desk at 410-548-5988.
4. Sign up for a research consultation with a librarian in the Research and Resources section of the Libraries home page salisbury.edu/libraries

Top Ten Best College Library!

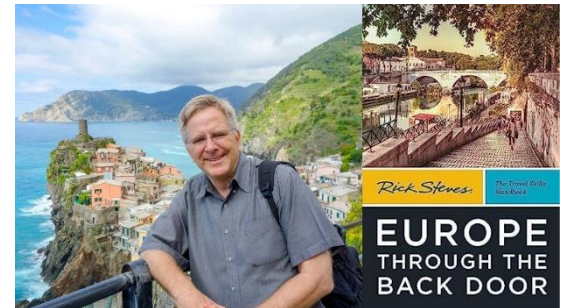

Elizabeth Thomsen, CC-BY-NC-SA 2.0

We are thrilled that the Princeton Review recognized the SU Libraries' Guerrieri Academic Commons as the tenth best college library in the country. This is a great honor. We are proud of our staff, spaces, and services. We are deeply grateful to the students who voted for us; to the students, faculty, and staff who use the GAC; and to the non-Libraries staff—from Housekeeping, Facilities, Dining Services, and the various academic support units—who help make the GAC special. As a token of our thanks, we will be providing free cake (well, cupcakes, anyway) on Tuesday, October 10. Come join us in celebration of this great ranking! The cupcakes will be available near the elevators on the first floor of the GAC, while they last.

Free Author Talks

We like to encourage reading! That's why we have "Leisure Books" in the Pit—popular novels, biographies, current non-fiction, cookbooks, etc. And that's why we have partnered with the Library Speakers Consortium to sponsor online author talks. Register online at <https://libraryc.org/salisburylibrary>. Upcoming talks:

- 10/10 at 4 pm: Rick Steves, European Travel Tips
- 10/18 at 2 pm: Ruth Ware, Master of Suspense
- 10/26 at 7 pm: John Irving, A Lifetime of Writing
- 11/1 at 8 pm: John Stamos, Actor and Author

Did You Know? The SU Arboretum became accredited in 1988 through the American Public Gardens Association. A search for arboretum in our Natural Science Collection database leads to nearly 15,000 results, including "Addressing Eastern Shore and Chesapeake Bay Environmental Issues and Economic Development: University Research and Education," which highlights the work of 6 universities, including SU.
