|                  | NOTE: This course goes beyond basic mediation and negotiation to Engages students in the major debates and nuances of practice in the field, specifically focusing on the interpersonal level of intervention. Distinctions are made concerning various mediation styles and various schools of thought on how and when to intervene in a case. Students create their own models of practice from a wide range of process skills and approaches and apply process and analytical knowledge to cases possessing various levels of complexity. Prerequisite: CADR 510. |                               |              |           |      |            |          |         |            |

|                  | NOTE: Examines theoretical base relating to conflict sources and conflict intervention. Provides a series of frameworks to place conflicts into various conflict maps and conflict models that will be used to analyze complex conflict dynamics. Theory frames conflict and practical intervention decisions. This course provides students an opportunity to have their work carried by professional media organizations around Maryland. With the professor serving as copy editor, students report on civic issues important to Maryland in general and the Salisbury area specifically. Student produced stories will be offered to media organizations around the state for use in traditional nightly newscasts or posting on professional media websites.  |              |           |            |             |         |            |

This course provides an overview of the communication methods used to investigate, deconstruct, and promote health and social issues. We will examine the communication devices available to those working with, or challenged by, traumatic health and social problems. We will analyze the ways that art, literature, and media influence public perceptions of health-related social phenomena such as death, terminal illness, long-term illness, AIDS, mental illness, drug use, child abuse, natural disasters, violence and consequences of war. Includes narrative accounts by people living with illness and or coping with tragic conditions. |              |           |            |             |         |            |

|                  | NOTE: The primary objective of this course is to prepare student teams to compete in either Google's Online Marketing Challenge or the Direct Marketing Education Foundation's Collegiate ECHO competition. In both competitions, students will be expected to fully develop an executable marketing campaign for an actual firm. For the Google project, students will execute their proposed campaign, modify the campaign, and report on their strategy to optimize their ad spend over the three week competition period. For the ECHO competition, students will develop an industry level agency presentation for the client identified by the DMA. |                             |              |           |            |            |                     |         |            |
