		Subtitle: Methodology and Biostatistics Combined Sections: Biol 490/590-010 Lec NOTE: Please register for Biology 490-011 to automatically enroll in Biology 490-010. The goal of the course is to train students to design experiments amenable to statistical analysis and to carry out statistical tests on biological data. This is an application-oriented course that emphasizes the choice of statistical tools and interpretation of experimental results. Students will learn to conduct statistical analyses and make journal-ready figures using the R programming language. Students will have access to Helix, the new cloud computing server that is part of my lab, for all their in-class and homework assignments.

		NOTE: A study of biodiversity, conservation biology, and ecology with a special focus on current issues. As the planet's last wild places effectively become islands in a sea of human development, Wilson and MacArthur's theories have become a useful tool in the conservation struggle that will dominate the 21st century. We will cover some of the big issues of today including taxonomy, biodiversity sampling and biodiversity indicators, and sustainability.

		NOTE: Examines theoretical base relating to conflict sources and conflict intervention. Provides a series of frameworks to place conflicts into various conflict maps and conflict models that will be used to analyze complex conflict dynamics. Theory frames conflict and practical intervention decisions. Theory and practice serve to inform each other in a cyclical, synergistic learning fashion.
