	NOTE: Modern Molecular Biology - The goal of this course is to expose students to recent discoveries, challenges, and applications of molecular biology. We will focus on the mechanisms of molecular biology within cells, the methods used to analyze these interactions, and their applications in basic research and biomedical treatments. The class format will focus on the discussion and analysis of primary research papers and literature reviews. There will be homework problems and writing assignments, student presentations, and we may include some hands-on lab activities that relate to molecular biology and its applications. Pre-reqs: Before enrolling in this course you must have a "C" or better in BIOL 350 and CHEM 221. Recommended pre-requisites: BIOL370 or CHEM417.

		Subtitle: Restorative Justice NOTE: This undergraduate course explores the theory and practice of restorative justice. The course provides students with an understanding of the causes of crime and delinquency, as well as general perceptions of crime victims and offenders in society. Then the practice of restorative justice as a response to crime and wrongdoing is carefully considered, as well as the guiding theory underlying it, including the healing paradigm in justice. Various forms of practice, stemming from diverse practice settings, are examined, including: victim-offender mediation, family group conferencing, peacemaking circles, victim-offender dialogue in cases of severe violence, and restorative justice practice in schools. This course also offers students opportunities to role-play and practice restorative justice skills.

Throughout the course, students will submit three batches of work which will be critiqued by other students and the instructor. Then, at the end of the semester, a piece chosen by each student will be taught to the class by another student. This will open a dialogue about that student's work, style and creative heritage. Students will also do presentations on pieces in their chosen genre selected from the course texts. In addition, students will present a journal profile to the class. We will discuss major streams in the discourse of each genre and read the following texts: Nicky Beer's The Octopus Game, Amina Gautier's At-Risk & John Jeremiah Sullivan's Pulp Head. As a final project, students will produce a professional quality personal	4	LEC	R	07:00PM	-09:45PM	FH 149	NIEVES

*3413	ENGL 496-001	TOPICS IN POETRY NOTE: Topics in Poetry (Writing the Other) This course is designed to help students deeply engage contemporary poetry and its trends, produce publishable work and become fluent in the language of contemporary poetry broadly and in one particular aspect of that conversation specifically. In this iteration of the course, we will focus on writing the other (both poems that address the other and techniques for creating work that contains or explores the other). The other, the non-self, has a long and rich history in poetry. In this course, we will read some of classic elegies on line and, through five monograph books, explore the range of manifestation and technique in the contemporary manifestations of the other and the social and personal responsibilities of such writing. We will pay special attention to persona poem, dramatic monologue and poetic	4	LEC	TR	11:00AM	-12:15PM	FH 149	NIEVES
