		Subtitle: Gender, Sexuality, Human Right NOTE: This course explores gender as a concept that shapes social and interactional perceptions. In this sense, gender functions as a prism through which people see others and are in turn seen by them. It proceeds on the theory that gender is socially constructed, and that social constructions of gender have served as justification for cultural, economic, political, psychological, and social violence. These constructions have also been used to delineate accepted rules of responsibility for violence and abuse, and to support and justify claims to unequal power and privilege. Several gender-based assumptions have served to create gender dichotomies when it comes to such subjects as war and peace, heroism, patriotism, innocence and vulnerability. Gendered images of war and violence have not only privileged men and boys as warriors, but they have also Subtitle: Social Media and Conflict NOTE: This course explores the dynamic interaction between social media and conflict. It looks at both the good and the bad of social media relative to conflict and conflict resolution. It exposes social media both as a weapon of conflict and a tool for conflict resolution. For the most part, students will explore the different ways that social media can be utilized as a tool for fostering peace, promoting good governance, preventing, managing, and resolving conflict. Arguably, the original idea of the social media was to offer cyber platform for social networking. Myspace, Facebook, Tweeter, Instagram, LinkedIn, Snapchat, WhatsApp, and countless others, were all designed for one thing and one thing only: social network. In other words, social media was intended as a peaceful and positive tool for social interaction. However, abundant evidence exists that NOTE: This course explores religion and its impact on the interactions of individuals, groups, and nations. It examines the role of organized religion in conflict and conflict transformation. It unveils religious traditions, including Buddhism, Daoism, Hinduism, Judaism, Christianity, Indigenous beliefs, and Islam as sources of both conflict and peace. It emphasizes the assets of religion for conflict transformation and peacebuilding. The orientation of the course will be dynamic, taking into account recent developments in the local, national, regional and world affairs. The course will provide ad hoc case studies in order to blend theory and practice.
